All waivers are done and on the web. We basically out of bullets on the waiver side. Hopefully the refineries can come back up soon.

Phil, just a quick update. Yesterday, folks in DFW were making runs on gas pumps and the news is reporting that gasoline and diesel would be in short supply and possibly unavailable. Last night, gas stations had long lines in some areas, and early this morning, lines were again forming.

One of the major local chains interviewed around 7 pm yesterday and said they expected shortages and planned to allocate to a reduced number of store fronts in DFW. That means some stations in that chain will have no gas delivered in the near future.

We expected this, but wanted to give you first hand update. I know you are working on further multistate waivers which may help shorten any supply issues in the immediate future.
